FORMAT THE SCRIPT

Formatting a script is extremely important. It helps a director to quickly decide whether he wants to take the project when he first sees it, in a pile of dozens of scripts. It helps actors to find their lines when they're on set. It tells the sound designer when to include sounds, and the cinematographer where to aim the camera.

Included below is a scene from the script for the Disney/Pixar film "Toy Story". Using the rules of script formatting provided on Worksheet B: Formatting a Script, re-write the text on the left side, with the proper script formatting, on the right side. You can assume blank lines will be added later.

Unformatted Script:

The camera is inside a crane game.

Woody clambers up the side of the deposit slot. Buzz says off screen, "This is an intergalactic emergency! I need to commandeer your vessel to Sector 12!"

Woody peeks over the partition to witness Buzz surrounded by the cute alien toys.
Buzz says to the aliens "Who's in charge here?"

All the aliens point upward. The Aliens say, "The cla-a-a-a-a-a-a-w!!" Woody and Buzz look up. The claw dangles directly above the toys.

The first Alien says, "The claw is our master."

The second Alien says, "The claw chooses who will go and who will stay."
